What is Long Term Care (LTC)?

Long term care is the assistance a person may need with the basic activities of daily living – eating, bathing, dressing, transferring, toileting, and continence. It can also include supervision needed to protect a person's health and safety. The need for long term care may develop from things such as an accident, illness, stroke, advanced age or other chronic condition such as Alzheimer's, dementia or Parkinson's disease. Long term care consists mainly of personal care rather than medical care, which is typically covered by a health plan.

Long Term Care can be provided...

- In your own home by a family caregiver or home health aide
- At an adult day care center
- In an assisted living facility or nursing home

It's important to plan ahead

What would happen if you were suddenly unable to perform simple activities that most of us take for granted every day – such as eating, dressing and bathing? Or if you required supervision as the result of a cognitive decline? Who would provide your care, and where would you live? And most importantly, could you afford to pay for it?

Many people require some amount of long term care services as they age. But a serious illness, disability or accident could also cause someone much younger to need long term care as well. Planning for the potential cost of long term care is something that everyone should consider.

LifeSecure can be there to help cover the cost of the care you may need. While it's difficult for healthy adults to think about needing such care, the potential for risk is real.

Without a long term care insurance plan in place, your care options may be limited and potential expenses could result in significant out-of-pocket costs – affecting your savings and assets. Long term care insurance was designed to provide an alternative solution. And LifeSecure can make it simpler and more affordable than you might think.

Will you need long term care?

Your chances may be more likely than you think. About 6 million Americans age 65+ require help with at least two activities of daily living for ninety days or more, or have a severe cognitive impairment.¹

Most people aren't planning ahead

- More than half of Americans are concerned about paying for LTC services (55%) ...²

- ... but only 1/3 of Americans over 40 have set aside money to plan for LTC needs (33%)³

Planning for long term care might be easier than you think

You protect your home, your car and your health. But what about your savings and retirement?

Many of us strive for financial security and plan for a comfortable retirement. But what if you could no longer take care of yourself? Relying on a relative or a friend for caregiving is certainly an option – especially for short periods of time. But if you needed personal care for weeks, months, or even years, it could be expensive for you and your family.

Your financial plan was likely designed to help you save for years of retirement. To help protect your savings, consider how you might pay for long term care services should the need arise for you or your spouse/partner.

Paying for Long Term Care

LTC services are not typically covered by medical insurance plans.

Medicare may help pay for limited LTC services under certain circumstances, but often doesn't meet long term care needs. Medicaid has specific rules and income requirements that can require recipients to spend down their savings and assets to meet state poverty guidelines.

Some people rely on care from family and friends, but it can impact the financial, physical and emotional health of entire families.

While an option for some, saving and paying for long term care out of your own pocket can be very difficult for most families. Just a few years of long term care could potentially deplete a lifetime savings.

Planning with long term care insurance can help protect your finances, provide peace of mind, and let you decide where care would be received.

How much coverage is enough?

It depends.

These factors can help you determine the right of coverage for your unique situation.

Your gender	→ On average, women are more likely to require long term care services than men (at age 65). ⁵
Your family health history	→ You may be at an increased risk for a chronic condition such as Alzheimer's disease, cancer, diabetes or stroke if a close family member has had one or more of these conditions. ⁶
Your budget	→ Select a plan design with a premium that fits within your current budget. It's a good idea to apply for coverage now while you are younger and likely healthier.
Where you plan to retire	→ The cost of long term care services can vary greatly depending on where you live.
Where you wish to receive care, if needed	→ Long term care costs vary based on where services are received (at home, in the community, at an assisted living facility, or at a nursing home).
